Use Your Keyword In Title: If there's one thing that you should keep in mind at all times when optimizing your WordPress blog for the search engines, then it has to be the title of your posts where you insert your keyword. This is one of the easiest and the strongest ways to get noticed by the search engines. However, you should stay away from keyword stuffing as much as you can. Use your primary keyword in the title only when you think it's necessary. Your title should not only read well but it should also make sense.

Check for Valid XHTML: Even though the majority of the code errors are minor and aren't really a threat, some of these errors may actually make the search engine spiders to misinterpret your content and give them a wrong impression. This may affect your ranking and harm your site's relationship with the search engines in the long run. The solution to this problem is to check if the XHTML code on your blog is valid or not. Even though WordPress produces code that is completely valid, these errors could be created because of poorly written themes/plugins. Don't Forget the Traditional SEO Tactics: At the end of the day, a WordPress blog is a website too, which is why you shouldn't ignore the usage of traditional SEO techniques that will help your blog climb the search engine ladder quicker. Things like using important keywords throughout your posts, creating internal links, bolding your keywords where needed and developing external links to your blog will help you immensely in getting your SEO in place, and give you the needed boost.
